Q: Grammar and Parse tree for this sentence How to derive parse tree for a sentence? Beach are cleaner than city. What is the correct one for the following sentences? S1. Beach are cleaner than city. S2. City and beach are cleaner than sea. Is 'city' and 'beach' always more concrete words or objects. If it is objects, why does the same is not valid for 'city and beach' as two objects instead of two adjectives. A: Both your S1 and S2 are grammatically correct. The difference is in nuance. S1 says that the beach is cleaner than the city; S2 says that the city is cleaner than the beach. However, S2 is pointless without any qualification; city is a name, but it's understood that the city in question is cleaner than the beach, so the city is a qualifier and the beach is an object. Q: Why is OR=1 in SQL Server 2008 so slow? This is a very simple query and yet it takes a long time: select * from t1 where OR=1 But this is fast: select * from t1 where OR is null Why? A: As very likely commented, this will just show all rows: select * from t1 where OR = 1 If you want to select for all rows where OR is non null you could use: select * from t1 where OR is null or OR = 1 This would still show all rows, but they would only have a value of OR = 1 (in contrast to the previous select * where OR = 1 which shows all rows with an OR of 1). In the end, this will depend on what you're looking for. Lacrosse Culture is rising, but MLS is being left behind For all the excitement for the 2018 Gold Cup, the pre-tournament matches and the start of the CONCACAF Champions League, there's a regional trend that has gone largely unnoticed: North American professional lacrosse has suddenly become a dominant force. While the NWSL is a major league league, the MLL - the official minor league to the NHL - has had its ranks deepened by the development of a junior league, the NLL, and a
