It has a population of 23,400. The town is situated north of the central southern Swedish province of Skåne, and between two motorways, E4 and E20. Forna is the capital of the Forna municipality. The name forn is from the Swedish language and means "fire river". The town has two universities, one in social science, and one in security studies. The town features prominently in the Count of Monte Cristo by Alexandre Dumas, having been portrayed as a river port and major coal depot. History Forna is an old town, and the town is known for its history of early Christianity. The town received charters from King Birger and kings of Skåne during the 11th century. The town also received charters in the 12th century from Queen Maud. In 1143, the town was given the rights to hold a fair as the oldest forn, having been a part of the oldest monastery of that time, Benedictine Christiansa. The town was also the seat of the diocese of V f678ea9f9e
